

A (time) map

Which part of the floor / ground do you sit/rest /walk the most- are you there alone? Do you feel alone there?

Which is the part of the house/path/city that is more alive? Where do you feel more alive? Are you the only one there? or is it that there are more living lively things there?

Which is the (live) landscape you look at the most? What are the living things in it?

Where is it that you feel there is more space, in the sense of outer space, in the sense where you can get connected to space itself there? Is there anyone else apart from space there?

Where can you get the most? The most of what you need? Where/what is the part of the house/space/city that you feel the least exposed to lack/depletion/scarcity

Where is the place that contains the most memories - in the sense of a personal history that leads your present/future?

How long is the duration of a present moment now compared to a present moment a year ago compared to a present moment 2 years ago?

How far away is a future moment from the present moment today, compared to yesterday, compared to 2 birthdays ago?
